London and New York, April 4th, 2022 - Quantexa (https://www.quantexa.com/?utm_campaign=PR%20%7C%20Press%20Release&utm_source=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.quant the global data and analytics software company pioneering Contextual Decision Intelligence (CDI), today announced that Dan Higgins has been appointed as Quantexa's new chief product officer, joining the rapidly growing global technology company's executive leadership team. In this role, Higgins will have executive responsibility for Quantexa's product and solution management organization and strategy.

Higgins joins Quantexa from EY where he was the global technology consulting leader, responsible for setting global strategy for the $5 billion business. In his successful executive career spanning two decades, he has led large technology, data and cyber teams and has been instrumental in developing EY's platform, product and asset strategy as one of the firm's global executives and leaders.

Prior to this, Higgins served in various leadership, project management and development roles for technology and management consulting organizations such as Arthur Anderson, Prudential Financial and Oxford Solutions. He will be based on the East Coast of the U.S., providing important leadership focus for North America as well as Quantexa's global product organization.

"I am absolutely thrilled that Dan has joined Quantexa's leadership team," said Vishal Marria, CEO of Quantexa. "Our ability to attract top talent like Dan is confirmation of the transformative technology and solutions we've developed to date across industries, regions and use cases. Dan is joining the company at a time of rapid growth and we're excited to have his experienced hand to help guide our product organization."

"Quantexa has built an amazing team and a remarkable technology platform that is disrupting industries and helping businesses transform. The organization has positioned itself as a clear innovator and leader in the rapidly evolving Decision Intelligence category." said Higgins. "I am delighted to join Quantexa at this pivotal moment in the company's growth trajectory, and I look forward to bringing my transformative expertise to the company as it continues to pursue its global growth goals."
