LONDON, UK and NEW YORK, USA, July 7, 2022 - Quantexa, a leading global provider of Contextual Decision Intelligence solutions for the public and private sectors, today announced that it has been named a 'Strong Performer' in The Forrester Wave™: Anti-Money-Laundering Solutions, Q3 2022.

Based on Forrester's 26-criterion evaluation, the report is aimed at helping financial institutions and government departments find the right solutions to meet their needs. Quantexa was identified as one of the 15 most significant AML solution providers in the market today.

According to the report, "[Quantexa] has differentiated KYC and CDD and transaction monitoring development roadmap plans as well as a robust product development, sales, support, professional services staffing, and system integrator partner ecosystem." It also notes, "Quantexa excels at WLM source configurations and scale... [and] uses a user interface and low code approach to allow admins to bring in multiple sources of data. The solution allows data scientists to use external models (Python, R, etc.) in the Quantexa scoring pipeline."

The Forrester Wave™ goes on to explain that Quantexa "currently offers an excellent productized watchlist, politically exposed persons (PEP) list integration, and productized sanctions list sources integrations." It notes, "Quantexa is a good fit for organizations looking for a KYC-first AML that integrates with an already deployed case management solution from another vendor."

Dan Higgins, Chief Product Officer at Quantexa, comments: "Chief Data Officers and AML professionals across the globe are relying on vendors in this space to help them run more effective and efficient investigations and monitoring to aid in reducing the impact of money laundering and fraud activities which present a growing major threat worldwide. We believe that the placement as a strong performer in Forrester's Wave is evidence that our approach to understanding risk as informed by contextualized data is an emerging best practice. We remain dedicated to providing our clients with a flexible solution, able to support all internal and external data sources, with an open architecture that easily integrates into a customer's existing IT environment."
