In the last few years the 'side hustle' has gone from eye rolling-inducing, inspirational LinkedIn fodder to something most people will need just to turn their oven on. Thanks to the cost of living crisis, there is a greater need to generate extra income and, with the rise of platforms like OnlyFans, Passion Digital (<https://passion.digital/>) wanted to look at where these new means of income rank amongst other side hustles in the UK.

The research data revealed

(<https://passion.digital/blog/pet-sitting-or-feet-pics-how-the-cost-of-living-crisis-made-side-hustles-a-necessity/>) that there has been a 267% increase in the last 12 months for the search term "sell feet pics", making it the side hustle with the biggest increase in search - there has also been an 84% increase YoY for people searching online for 'side hustle ideas'.

The shocking data also revealed that searches for how to set up an OnlyFans channel increased by 69%, making it the second biggest side hustle in our list. "Selling used underwear" also saw an increase in interest, coming 4th in our list, with a 56% increase.

Passion Digital as a small-medium size UK business is fully aware of the challenging economic times faced for the business, its clients and staff. The above trends reflect the critical economic environment we're going through and the company felt that it was of great importance to share this research.

Tim Greatrex, CEO at Passion Digital says:

"It's an incredibly turbulent time economically and as an agency we are trying our best to support our clients and staff through the storm. We've implemented a few initiatives internally to support our employees and we're keeping an open dialogue with all of our clients to pivot strategies in order to further aid their wider business goals. The more we can do to shine a light on how the economic climate is affecting people in the UK in less obvious ways, the more we can be part of the conversation to come out of this difficult financial time better."
