9 October 2024, London: The Masterclasses by National Geographic Traveller (UK), sponsored by MPB.com, is back, and this time, it's offering attendees the best of both worlds. For the first time, the event will feature a series of virtual sessions held over two nights and a special in-person live experience. As always, each session is designed to help budding travel writers and photographers sharpen their technical skills and hone their creative instincts.

The Virtual Experience: learn from anywhere

Held on the evenings of 28 and 29 January 2025, the virtual sessions are ideal for those wanting to learn from the comfort of their own home. The four sessions will feature senior members of the National Geographic Traveller (UK) team as well as expert photographers and writers, with recordings of each workshop made available to attendees for a limited time.

The In-Person Experience: meet the professionals

On 30 January 2025, National Geographic Traveller (UK) will hold a special live event at Buffini Chao Deck at the National Theatre in London, bringing together the magazine's senior editors, designers and contributors with a host of like-minded travel enthusiasts. The event, which runs from 6pm to 8.30pm, features two panel sessions and offers attendees a chance to meet some of the UK's most celebrated travel writers and photographers, and make valuable connections. In addition, all ticket holders will also be given access for a limited time to recordings of the four virtual sessions.
