Leading solutions and services company Deverill has appointed Angela Palmer as general manager of its Solutions Business Unit, responsible for sales to customers throughout the UK. The appointment is from within the company.

Angela has a total of some 20 years in sales, primarily in the IT sector. She has worked in sales management roles within Deverill for 5 years. Before joining Deverill, Angela was employed with IT companies 2GL and Gti Electronics.

Angela joined Deverill as SME sales manager responsible for developing sales of IT in this very rapidly growing sector. She subsequently was promoted to commercial sector manager, during which time her team signed a number of significant contracts including one of the largest Compaq server Data Centres in the United Kingdom.

According to Deverill Managing Director, Richard Ashmore, 'Our Solutions Business Unit is a key part of our strategic plan for future growth and Angela's extensive experience in this important area made her our first choice for this key management role.'

Says Angela, 'Remaining successful in a difficult and competitive market is a major challenge and I believe the key lies in appointing the right people with the right skills to meet that challenge and supporting them with the right products and services for our customers.'
