Leading wholesale broker signs five year data centre services agreement

London - 2 July June 2003 - TeleCity (LSE: TCY.L), the award-winning pan European data centre services company, has signed a five year agreement with Tullett plc, a global leader in the provision of broking services for international trading organisations, to provide data centre and outsourcing solutions to the company.

"TeleCity's understanding of our business and their proactive approach convinced us that they were the right partner for us," said Peter Jacobs, Infrastructure Manager at Tullett. "TeleCity facilities offer high levels of security, resilience, redundancy and technical excellence - the four key decision making factors in our judging process when sourcing a third party data centre."

"Tullett is a leading global brokerage and we are delighted that they have chosen TeleCity as a datacentre services provider," said Rick Hudson, CEO TeleCity. "Tullett's commitment demonstrates its belief in our ability to offer data centre and IT infrastructure services to leaders in the financial services industry."

Key to TeleCity winning the agreement was the ability to demonstrate strength in areas such as physical resilience in terms of infrastructure, security and power, rapid engineering response 24 x 7 and network resilience with the presence of multiple network availability.
