Reading, 26 August 2003 -- BlackSpider Technologies, a world-leader in e-mail content filtering services today announced a partnership agreement with REDNET, a leading Internet Service Provider focused on delivering end-to-end solutions for corporate and SME organisations.

Under the terms of the agreement, REDNET will be able to supply BlackSpider's leading edge spam filtering and virus detection services to its business customers, under its own brand name: REDshield.

'We are seeing the volume of spam and virus infected e-mail travelling across the Internet, increase exponentially. Our customers are now demanding services which can filter these malicious messages before they reach their network' explains Mike Revell, Managing Director of REDNET. 'We spent a considerable amount of time looking for a supplier in this market and chose BlackSpider because of the quality of their service and their willingness to work effectively with partners.'

REDNET's REDshield e-mail scanning service is a natural extension to REDNET's Internet connectivity and security solutions and will provide increased levels of protection for their customers.

John Cheney, CEO of BlackSpider agrees. 'Virus and spam protection services are an obvious up-sell opportunity for ISPs looking to deliver high value solutions to their end-users. We are very pleased to have been chosen by REDNET as their preferred partner.'
