A major supplier to leading supermarket chains, including Asda and Marks and Spencer, has chosen to integrate Document Management software from Version One into existing Navision accounting software, as part of its strategy to dramatically reduce paper consumption, decrease costs and substantially improve efficiency.

An innovative red meat processor based in Northern Ireland, Linden Foods supply directly to many leading supermarket chains, as well as promoting their own-branded range of high quality meat products. Linden Foods was formed in 1998, as a merger between two of Northern Ireland's leading Red Meat processors and exporters - Granville Meats Ltd and Milltown Livestock & Meat Company Ltd.

Paul Johnston, Financial Director of Linden Foods, explained, Version Ones document management and imaging system was our preferred choice because its very robust, is simple for the staff to use and works seamlessly with our existing Navision system. We now have the ability to archive and instantly retrieve a wide range of corporate information, giving instant look-up of documents, which can then be re-printed or automatically sent to recipients as required. This will obviously have a tremendously positive impact on our business processes, giving us great peace of mind.

He continued, Well use this new software initially within our Accounting and Payroll divisions, followed shortly by the Specifications team. The Quality team is particularly pleased to be able to use the system for their traceability reports, which is especially important to us when dealing with such high-profile clients. Our cost savings and efficiency improvements throughout the company will be tremendous.

Tony Bray, Director of Version One, concluded, With the current decline in prices for Document Imaging hardware and software, were seeing a dramatic rise in the number of Navision users implementing our document management and imaging systems.
