Movietrak.co.uk offers a cure for 'Sex and the City' withdrawal symptoms

Women everywhere wiped away a tear on Friday as the final episode of Sex and the City saw the girls hang up their Gucci dresses and sip their last Cosmopolitans to live happily ever after - but fans who can't imagine life without Carrie and co can rent the first five TV series available on DVD for free at www.movietrak.co.uk

Movietrak.co.uk, the most established online DVD rental service, is offering a 14 day free trial so viewers already experiencing withdrawal symptoms can rent all of the Sex and the City DVDs, from the very first episode to the end of the fifth series, delivered straight to their doors. By simply signing up online, SATC addicts can kick off their Manolos and re-live Carrie's first encounter with Mr. Big or one of Samantha's outrageous sexual exploits.

The service is simple to use. Customers make an online list of titles they would like to view and their first two choices will immediately be dispatched. Each time one is returned another DVD will automatically be sent out, ensuring a constant supply of everyone's favourite New York heroines. The discs can be kept for as long as they're needed, as there are no due dates and therefore no fines incurred for late returns. Customers just use the pre-paid envelope to post them back when they have finished.

For customers wanting to subscribe to Movietrak.co.uk the service costs £13.95 per month to rent an unlimited number of DVDs. The service offers thousands of titles from the latest blockbuster movies, to classic favourites and TV series.

For further press information or if you would be interested in working with Movietrak to set up competitions or offer free trials to the service please contact:
