PRESS RELEASE FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

2nd February 2005

Datawatch Europe holds first banking Seminar in Hungary

Datawatch Europe, publishers of Monarch, data mining software are to hold their first banking seminar in Hungary on Tuesday, 15th February 2005 at the British Embassy. Monarch enables organisations to perfect business process management without investing in expensive new technology, by combining and mining totally separate databases to produce seamless reports.

Robert Graham, Datawatch Europe Product Manager says "Datawatch is very proud to be sponsoring this important forum for banks in Hungary to be held at the British Embassy. Its focus is on the Basel II Accord. Our range of software, based around the industry benchmark report and data mining tool Monarch Pro, has much to offer institutions attempting to roll out compliance with the Accord while attempting a 'business as usual' approach. The list of speakers will stimulate much interest. Datawatch prefers to deliver important information to customers rather than offering product demonstrations. Any institution wrestling with compliance will get a huge amount of input from this event."
