Integration Consortium Launches Website to Increase Interaction between Members and Non-members

London & New York, February 10 2005 &#9472; The Integration Consortium (IC) today announced that it has launched a new website at www.integrationconsortium.org

The website has been designed in order to provide many more resources and activities for visitors, including:

- „X The Integration Soapbox ¡V a blog platform for members
- „X The Integration Roundtable ¡V forum for members and non-members to interact
- „X IC Media Room ¡V with all the latest news, plus in-depth articles
- „X Features Section ¡V integration tips, analyst articles, whitepapers, newsletters
- „X What¡s New Section ¡V links to all new content
- „X Ask the Experts Corner ¡V answers to your integration questions

As well as having additional content and opportunities for interaction between both members of the IC and non-members, the new website will enable easier and quicker navigation.

Michael Kuhbock, Founder and Co Chairman of the IC comments: ¡§Since our inception in 2001 the Integration Consortium has strived to provide a forum for promoting best practices and education in integration. The launch of our new website is the latest development designed with our end user members in mind ¡V it will offer them a wealth of resources and interaction that will aid their integration projects with both practical and theoretical information.¡¨
