Scalable Networks the specialist integrator providing secure, converged network solutions, today commences a contract to provide an innovative, managed remote access solution for MTV Europe, Europe's largest 24-hour music television network. The network will support a 700-strong global roaming workforce.

The solution will enable remote users access to web-based applications and corporate data from anywhere in the world, via a secure environment using an SSL VPN solution from AEP/Netilla, and integrated two-tier authentication. Network performance will be monitored remotely by Scalable.

"Using our expertise, skills and best-in-class technology, Scalable offers organisations like MTV, the opportunity to roll-out critical applications and shared files to remote users all over the world, without having to worry about complicated integration processes or maintaining VPN clients on individual devices." Says Simon Brown, Director, Scalable Networks.

Adding, "Our ability to mould best-of-breed technologies into rounded solutions, working with world-class vendors such as AEP/Netilla, allows our customers to adopt business processes that achieve greater productivity and continuity. The contract with MTV is another example of how our technical expertise is being utilised in leading organisations across the UK and Europe."

The installation is due for completion in April 2005, and will sit at MTV's UK headquarters in London, and their European base in Bussom, Netherlands.
