Leading business systems integrator Cedilla Systems, has today announced that its Infrastructure Division is to provide a completely updated network for the chartered accountancy firm Alexander & Co.

Cedilla will update Alexanders entire network using Microsoft Windows 2003 Active Directory. Alexanders chose Windows 2003 because its remote access functionality will allow staff working offsite to access the corporate network, enabling Alexanders' workforce to be much more flexible and consequently more productive.

Alexanders also felt the built-in security features of Windows 2003 made it an excellent choice for a business that has to store and protect a great deal of client information.

Cedilla will install an Internet Security Appliance with a built-in firewall, offering greatly enhanced protection from a variety of online threats. The new system will also allow senior staff at Alexanders to monitor internet usage within the organisation.

Cedilla's Infrastructure Division was launched in August 2004 and is a single source for hardware, networking, security and communications solutions, providing a more comprehensive and tailored service for every client.

Leading the division is Pete Bostock, Infrastructure Manager at Cedilla, who has 16 years' of IT industry experience. "I am confident that Alexanders will see a marked improvement in its network efficiencies once we have completed this upgrade. This improvement will also be reflected in Alexanders' business processes."
