Oxygen 4 is the latest Private Jet Air Charter company to take to the industry. Established in March 2005 the company has already exceeded all expectations of the industry including those of the three directors, Mark Green, Steven Jack and Rod Glassford. The directors who formed the company after serving the industry with one of the largest brokerage companies, decided the time was right to establish Oxygen 4 after the industry has been in a period of depression. Now the industry is most definitely buoyant and the trend is continuing to rise to levels not seen since pre-9/11 thus proving their thoughts.

The company have a strict confidentiality policy and therefore specific information is not possible to divulge, what Oxygen 4 can say is that they already have worked for governments, stars of sports, film and media as well as some of the worlds' largest financial organisations. The phrase "no job too big, no job too small" is clearly in operation here, undertaking flights such as a surprise 40th wedding anniversary weekend from London-Switzerland through to a Middle Eastern Royal family with it's entourage from Europe-Las Vegas.

So what is it that is different about this company. Well, whilst the mechanics of Private Jet Brokage is relatively simple, it is about how they go about achieving the right results - quality doesn't necessarily come at a cost and vice-versa, price doesn't have to compromise quality. Each director is totally different from the other and whilst relatively young, they are dynamic and have combined experience of over 30 years in the industry, it is their diverse thinking that gives them the edge when playing off each others strengths. In such a competitive industry; no longer is it possible to get away with the 'Jurassic' methods of Air Charter brokerage - people expect more ! Companies need to keep one step ahead of the game and think very much outside of the box, this is instilled into each member of staff that the company employs.

Having achieved break-even as early as month 4, the company really is cooking on gas... perhaps Oxygen !
