As the rate of unemployment soars and competition for existing vacancies becomes tougher still, the pressure is on for job-seekers to sharpen up their skill-set and possibly turn their hand to professions they would otherwise never even have considered - as in the case of Dee Momi (established Stylist and founder of www.clotheshorseuk.com) who has combined her wealth of PA and creative experience and come up with the unique "Wonder Girl Friday (<http://www.wondergirlfriday.com>)" concept.

"For someone who needs maybe just a few hours of help a week running their home-based business, or some assistance with a one-off project, advertising for the position or approaching a recruitment agency can prove expensive and time-consuming," says Dee. "With Wonder Girl Friday (<http://www.wondergirlfriday.com>), there are no registration fees to pay or any contracts to sign – whatever you need done, consider it taken care of."

Dee's impressive client list speaks volumes about the calibre of service expected from her – Selfridges, Sky TV, Models 1, Salvatore Ferragamo and Max Factor can be counted amongst those she has worked for in a creative capacity.

She has also organised the teams of London 2012, Fleming Family and Partners, Jones Lang LaSalle and Nigel Burgess.

"Working with new clients is really exciting," she says "There are often tasks they have put off doing because they simply do not have the time and to be able to complete it for them to a standard they are extremely happy with is very satisfying."

The added bonus of this Wonder Girl is her freelance availability – including early mornings, evenings, weekends – she can fit around you and is sure her impeccable reliability (just one sick day off work since July 2001) makes her an asset worth having!
