12 February 2009 – Children at wedding receptions can be a delight or a disaster, depending on how bored they get. Now children's party specialist Les Enfants (<http://www.lesenfants.co.uk>) has created a Wedding Activity Box to keep kids entertained throughout the big day.

The pack - presented in a stylish white box to suit most wedding themes - contains a wedding activity book, stickers, coloured pencils, a card game, a board game with spinner and counters, and a keepsake box. It is suitable for children aged three to ten and costs £18 each, a cost effective alternative to providing childcare.

"Children at a wedding can be lovely, but long speeches and having to sit still can test the patience of even the most angelic child. Normally parents have to pack a few toys or crayons in their bag when going to a wedding with their children. Our packs take that hassle away as they'll keep kids occupied for hours, letting their parents relax and enjoy themselves," explains Katie Burnett, founder of Les Enfants.

For brides with a bigger budget, the company also offers Le Kids Club, a childcare service to look after younger guests, which works to Ofsted guidelines. Activities on offer include Le Cinema, Le Games Station, Le Jungle Gym, Le Arts & Crafts market, Le Village, Le Cosy Corner and Le Theatre.

"Grown up guests get to enjoy their child-free time and children get to have their own 'big day' but still be part of yours," says Burnett.
