Multilingualvacancies.com reports healthy level of vacancies and sponsor The Language Recruitment Fair

Despite the economic landscape, candidates with language skills are still very much in demand. That's according to the specialist language job board Multilingualvacancies.com (<http://www.multilingualvacancies.com>) which is reporting over 2000 vacancies for language skills on its website.

"All businesses are currently having to find ways to become more competitive and productive", says Associate Director Miranda Reid, "and often that's going to involve looking outside traditional domestic borders to find new business. Consequently, organisations that are dealing with international customers are going to need language skills and we predict this as an ongoing trend throughout 2009."

Because of this trend, multilingualvacancies.com is also the new sponsor of The Language Recruitment Fair which takes place at The Language Show in the autumn. "It's the UK's biggest event for linguists and has over 13,000 visitors and we're delighted to be involved", said Reid.
