With an increasingly gloomy outlook it's great to have some good news to report

Innovative businessman Lee Cooper (<http://www.coopersexhibitions.co.uk>) announced today that his unique flooring system, developed initially for exhibition displays (<http://www.coopersexhibitions.co.uk>), is now available for use in business and home offices around the world.

Practical, versatile and very clever

Made from recycled poly-propylene this office flooring system allows for all cables and wiring to be easily concealed underneath.

Its unique inter-locking construction means that desks and equipment can be located absolutely anywhere in the room, miles away from the nearest power point with no trailing cables. It is only 2cm thick and its smooth finish means that you can lay any floor covering over the top to match the rest of the house or building. It even comes with an optional ramped edging.

Easier, safer working environments

Simple to fit to any shape of space, it requires no cutting or specialist knowledge it's 100mm square modules just snap together. It's also lightweight and easy to get into that third floor loftspace! In fact, it's probably the best, safest office flooring you could imagine.

Lee says of his new flooring:

"This system has evolved beautifully. The new, smoother flooring is the perfect solution for the smallest study to the largest open plan office. With so many people renting office space or working from home, it is a cost-effective solution for temporary cable flooring.

Created to be incredibly hard-wearing, it will last an age. And if you move you simply roll it up and take it with you. It can be re-configured to fit any space it can even be used outdoors now there's a thought."
