Archive One from C2C has been nominated as Archiving & Compliance Product of the Year; Archive One Installation at University of Liverpool is nominated as Archiving & Compliance Solution of the Year.

READING, UK, 8 April 2009: C2C, the leading provider of email archiving and data management solutions, today announced that it is a finalist in the 2009 Storage Awards with its award-winning email archiving software solution, Archive One, within the Archiving & Compliance Product and Solution of the Year categories.

Winners will be chosen via online voting available at the Storage Awards 2009 Awards website, <http://www.storage-awards.com/> open until May 29th. The Storage Awards is arguably the most prestigious award scheme for the storage industry, allowing readers of the Storage Magazine and an editorial panel to nominate their favourite products and companies. The final Award winners will be announced at a champagne reception in London on June 11th.

"It's great to be in the finalist shortlist again for the Storage Awards in two competitive categories" commented Dave Hunt, CEO at C2C. "It's also gratifying that one of our end user testimonials at the University of Liverpool has been made a finalist in the Archiving Solution of the Year, endorsing their experience of Archive One."

C2C's Archive One solutions help organisations solve the headaches and heartaches of email, file and messaging capacity, access and protection management. Archive One enables administrators to enforce data retention policies and comply with various regulatory requirements regarding the use, access and retention of critical data, such as Sarbanes-Oxley, Freedom of Information Act, HIPAA, Gramm-Leach-Bliley, SEC and NASD Directives. Archive One technology is built on an advanced analytical search and policy enforcement engine, consisting of a very broad-based, in-depth and mature set of analysis criteria used throughout the product line to centralise, automate and accelerate tasks to reduce risk and improve system usage.
