London, UK: io global limited, the location-based digital services provider, has today unveiled a new corporate brand identity; iome. The rebrand heralds the company's concentrated focus on pioneering personalised, location-based technology that monetises digital lifestyle services.

iome is a technology company providing internet and mobile services, that link activities, interests, locations, routes and places so consumers can plan and book, all based on their preferences and where they are at any time.

Having already delivered a market-first with the BT MyPlace service in February 2009, the company is focused on continuing to innovate under its new iome identity. iome is helping brands, network infrastructure providers and government organisations deliver compelling digital lifestyle offerings to end users, via their device of choice.

iome CEO, Phil Eames said: "Demand for accessing relevant content and information on-the-go is rapidly increasing but not many businesses know how to deliver such services and content. iome meets this demand: we already have a proven technology and business model that monetises the digital opportunity. As such, we are focused on working in partnership with businesses that are looking to give consumers exactly what they want, and more, by delivering unique, forward-thinking digital lifestyle services that can be accessed at any time, anywhere.

Our knowledge, experience and technical capabilities will support businesses that wish to engage further with customers to develop closer relationships, whilst increasing revenues. As iome, we aim to lead the digital lifestyle services market by delivering relevant, personalised and location-centric services to end-users."

The new brand, logo and website for iome take effect immediately. For further information on iome, visit <http://www.io-me.com>.
