The concept of online divorce has been around for ten years or more now and most websites offering services to the UK consumer concentrate on offering DIY or self help packages.

Companies such as lawpack and Quickie Divorce are the best examples of the DIY services where the consumer just gets some forms, a guide and told to get on with it.

There are around 155,000 divorces every year and the majority of them are uncontested, but the majority of consumers still use high street solicitors, paying on average £1,000 + court fees to get their uncontested divorce dealt with.

This is simply because many people still want the security of a trusted brand...namely a high street solicitor.

www.AbsoluteDivorce.Com has come up with the solution to this by offering two levels of service via the Internet.

www.AbsoluteDivorce.Com provide either a Certified Paralegal service or a Solicitors Service for those who continue to want their divorce dealt with by traditional legal service providers, divided by price.

The service is being provided by Online Legal Services Ltd which is one of the UK's largest Paralegal Law firms who operate websites in the legal, property and financial sectors and have over ten years experience in this space.

The cost of a Certified Paralegal divorce starts at just £182.00 and the Solicitor Divorce is £299.00, both representing considerable savings when compared to the high street law firm.

With the recession taking its toll on peoples finances, it makes sense for consumers to get the best deals without sacrificing quality of service and the company aims to take a large market share from high street solicitors and their online rivals over the next 12 months.

A large online marketing campaign has been initiated across all the major search engines to drive traffic to the website.
