iomart Hosting, has secured a £200,000 ($328,000) contract from Servecentric in Ireland to provide the UK mainland Disaster Recovery facility for a large US multinational.

iomart Hosting secured the three year partnership deal to augment the top tier hosting services that Servecentric, the Irish data centre managed services company, is already providing to the same customer in Dublin.

iomart Hosting, the managed hosting (http://www.iomarthosting.com/managed_hosting) arm of AIM listed iomart Group plc, has been contracted to provide Servecentric with a DR solution from its fully resilient Tier 3 data centre (http://www.iomarthosting.com/about-us/our-approach/our-data-centres/london)in the City of London.

Servecentric chose iomart Hosting as its UK mainland partner based on its technical infrastructure, flexibility and existing blue chip clients and because it was able to deliver the exacting criteria required by a global company including meeting the highest levels of capacity, resilience and security.

Angus MacSween, CEO, iomart Hosting said:" We expect this partnership to be the beginning of a long and fruitful relationship with Servecentric. Providing resilient mainland back-up in partnership with Servecentric shows that we have a lot to offer to the American market. Our collective resources will serve to attract many more international hosting deals to the UK and Ireland."

Helga Muir, sales and marketing manager for Servecentric, said: "Servecentric has experienced a surge in multinational corporations choosing to move their European IT infrastructure into our facility in recent months.   To provide additional support to these customers, we wanted a UK based data centre partnership that could provide the highest quality technical infrastructure, experienced technicians and company ethos similar to their own. iomart Hosting has proven its credentials in all these areas and we look forward to partnering on reciprocal business going forward."
