eXpansys, one of the world's leading online technology superstores and specialists in smartphones and laptops, makes its exhibitor debut at this year's popular Gadget Show Live.

From the 7th to the 11th of April, eXpansys will be rounding up and placing on show a collection of some of the most exciting innovations in consumer electronics set to make waves in 2010. First up for smartphone (<http://www.expansys.com/mobile-phones>) enthusiasts will be an exclusive display of HTC's brand new mobiles including the eagerly anticipated Android-powered HTC Legend, HTC Desire and Windows-powered HTC HD Mini.

Another eXpansys exclusive display will see the unveiling of the latest addition to the Optoma Pico Pocket Projector range; a cool little device able to project content onto nearby surfaces with amazing colour and clarity. You can also project content from a handheld device including: mobile phones, mobile gaming devices (<http://www.expansys.com/gaming>) (inc. PSP3000), digital cameras (<http://www.expansys.com/cameras/digital-cameras>), Laptops and Netbooks. The new Pico also boasts a built in media player with micro SD card slot.

In addition to those exclusive products at the show, the leading technology retailer will also be showcasing a selection of the most exciting new gadgets including Drobo desktop storage devices from Data Robotics. eXpansys experts will be on standby to talk visitors through everything on display from the world's biggest manufacturers.

There will also be a limited number of Gadget Show Live exclusive show deals including a special offer on the latest HTC smartphones and some great deals on BlackBerry, Sony and iGo. Visitors to the Gadget Show Live can visit the eXpansys stand to find out more.

Anthony Catterson, chief executive officer of eXpansys said: "With a huge array of technological 'must-haves' expected to be on display inside the arena this year, eXpansys will be proud to help gadget lovers get their hands on their dream devices first."
