Randstad Education Bristol has announced the winner of its schools competition, designed to mark the leading UK and global educational staffing specialist's rebrand from Select Education. In keeping with Randstad Education's name change, the Bristol office asked pupils in local schools what they would change about the city they live in to make it better.

The overall winner was Year 6 pupil, Poppy Morris from Headley Park Primary School and the runner up was Year 2 pupil Bethany Orchard, also of Headley Park Primary.

Randstad Education district manager and competition judge, Andrea Musty, comments: "The standard of entries across Bristol schools was incredibly high but Poppy and Bethany's creative writing and selfless observations clearly stood out."

Both were recognised as a particular talent by Headley Park Primary head teacher Brian Walton. Mr Walton highlighted the schools commitment to being eco-friendly as a great inspiration for the winning piece of writing and hopes that more children will acknowledge the need to be green and clean in the future.

Winning entry:

What a Load of Rubbish!

Sofas and chairs left out in the rain
What's going on in a Bristolian's brain?

It looks really messy
I get extremely stressy

Cookers and fridges left out in the street
Let's try and keep Bristol ever so neat

Get rid of our stuff in the right way
Otherwise my hair will turn grey!

Charities collect this sort of stuff for free
And then pass it on to others you see

Let's help each other out
And then we can shout

No fly-tipping in our city

Let's make Bristol pretty!

By Poppy Morris, Year 6, Headley Park Primary School

Runner-up:

What would change about the city you live in to make it better?

I would change people's way of thinking. I think people should be more kind and helpful in every way towards each other. I think we should take care of our families if they are not well or older and need help with things.

In school don't bully other people and think about what you need to do in an argument to sort out the problem. Don't be afraid to try new things, be positive and try it because you might like it.

Sharing is caring so you should share with other people when playing with toys. Think about how you use school equipment as it is expensive to replace if it gets broken.

I think people should listen to the parents and teachers to stay safe. I think people should change the way they think for the better.

By Bethany Orchard, Year 2, Headley Park Primary School

About Randstad Education
