Forget designer shoes and handbags or expensive jewellery, having a cosmetic procedure for Christmas could be right at the top of the list.

Botox (<http://www.sknclinics.co.uk>) could be at an all-time high in January because more women could be requesting the treatments as part of their Christmas wish list according to skincare experts sk:n clinics.

The cosmetic procedure is becoming more popular with woman of all ages and backgrounds and is far more easily available than ever before. Now that it's possible to have the treatment in clinics all over the country, having it on the top of a Christmas list could be just as easy as asking for a piece of jewellery or item of clothing.

Rather than waiting to see what their partners have bought them taking out the element of surprise could be exactly what every girl wants.

Gill Grozier, Marketing Manager for sk:n said: "We are expecting far more people coming into the clinic over Christmas or just after with vouchers from their loved ones.

"It's so quick and easy to have a cosmetic procedure done at one of our clinics that more ladies in-particular are coming in for consultations that ever before. It's great to see that the stigma attached to having treatments is slowly dying out so we can hope to have more people in the future requesting cosmetic procedures as part of their Christmas or Birthday wish lists."

Now with government plans to make the procedure safer by urging members of the public to use administrators from a list of approved practitioners, the Treatments You Can Trust register, having the treatment could be much more appealing to many women than ever before.

At sk:n clinics all new patients are required to have a consultation with a doctor before commencing treatment giving patients extra piece of mind before deciding to go ahead.

sk:n will not administer Botox (<http://www.sknclinics.co.uk>) to people under the age of 25 unless clinically indicated.
