Belfast, Northern Ireland, 24th May 2011 – Bohill Consulting (<http://www.bohillconsulting.com>), a specialist provider in Information Technology, Software and Telecommunication consultancy (<http://www.bohillconsulting.com>), today announces the launch of a unique Project Assurance service. Bohill have developed the Project Assurance service to assist clients in ensuring the successful delivery of major IT and Business change programmes.

The new service expands Bohill's ICT-related services as market demand continues to increase in response to technology convergence and product innovation.

The new Project Assurance service will help companies more accurately and quickly identify and evaluate project risk and improve delivery confidence.

"Many companies have projects which struggle to deliver the benefits that are expected of them with a quarter of all major change programmes failing to complete while around three quarters under deliver. Our clients recognise the importance of project success and the need to reduce the risk of project failure and increase business value," said James Burns, Bohill's Principal Consultant. "Expanding our consultancy services to include Project Assurance demonstrates our commitment to helping clients to reduce the risk of project failure and increase business value."

Bohill Consulting delivers dynamic and innovative business solutions to the ICT industry. Bohill provides "Concept to Delivery" Consultancy including Pre-Investment Due Diligence, Technical Appraisals, Project Management, Business Planning and Management.
