Specialist engraving (<http://www.signindustries.com/products/engraving-materials/>) and sign making manufacturer Sign Industries has just launched its new and improved website.

The internet has become firmly established as part of every day life, our knowledge, experience and expectations of the web have grown considerably too.

In response to how rapidly the web is evolving, Sign Industries decided it was time to completely re-build its website to ensure it meets the demands of today's savvy users.

The internet is now many people's first port of call in the buying cycle, as the web makes it so easy for users to find and research items they are interested in, no matter how unique.

Whilst Sign Industries manufactures products tailored to each order it receives, the web still provides the business with a fantastic opportunity to showcase the many varying pieces of work it produces through its new cutting edge image library. This helps the business demonstrate to new potential customers the broad and varied types of products it manufactures, the high quality and its solid track record in fulfilling orders for many well known and respected organisations.

Sign Industries Managing Director Paul Cargill commented, "I think it is fair to say our previous site was looking a little tired and was in a need of a face lift. Not only have we completely transformed and improved the user experience for our visitors, but building a new site has also paved way for a brand new back-end interface. So finally we have a content management system that enables staff at Sign Industries to update and manage content on our website in an instant, which previously we were unable to do. So I am delighted the new site is live so we can enjoy and appreciate the benefits it brings to the business".

Based near Forfar, Scotland, Sign Industries is a well respected sign making specialist whose specialism is working with bronze, brass and stainless steel. They not only manufacture metal signs in all shapes and sizes but also provide intricate etching – producing high quality engraved plaques (<http://www.signindustries.com/products/engraving-materials/>) and memorial plaques (<http://www.signindustries.com/products/memorial-plaques/>).
