If you run a small company, most of the time you don't need lots of space, as you can manage perfectly well with a home office or similar minimal business environment. However, there will always be times when it is helpful to have that extra bit of space – and meeting rooms for rent can be a great solution for temporary additional requirements.

Commercial office space business Bruntwood has a large portfolio of Manchester meeting rooms (<http://www.bruntwood.co.uk/meeting-rooms/>), both in Manchester city centre and elsewhere in Greater Manchester, costing from just £10 an hour to hire.

All offer a professional environment in which to welcome your visitors, whatever size or location you need – and there is also a range of styles to choose from to achieve the image you want to project. For example, you might prefer a minimalist office space (<http://www.bruntwood.co.uk/office/>) right in the city centre to pitch to a future-focused potential client. Alternatively, your business might be better represented by an attractive period property in a more relaxed geographical setting.

Bruntwood's meeting rooms can also be used for interviews and training sessions for existing staff. Whether you need a single room for a private conversation for just one hour, or conference facilities (<http://www.bruntwood.co.uk/centurionhouse/office/>) for a hundred people for a full day, you're certain to find an ideal solution in Bruntwood's range of properties.

Amenities include AV equipment and video conferencing and a meeting administration service to ensure your planned event will proceed as you wish.

Bruntwood's Manchester city centre meeting rooms include 111 Piccadilly, City Tower, Portland Street, Portland Tower and St James', all located around the Piccadilly and Oxford Street end of town and boasting excellent transport links by rail and bus; and Centurion House on premier street Deansgate, with easy access to Manchester's key financial and shopping districts.

The company's selection of Cheshire meeting rooms features Landmark House in Cheadle Hulme, White House at Wilderspool Business Park in Warrington, Booths Park and Booths Hall near Knutsford and Station House in Altrincham. Meanwhile, Atria in Bolton caters for requirements in the north of Greater Manchester.
