MGI SOFTWARE APPOINTS NEW VICE PRESIDENT OF E-COMMERCE IMAGING & CORPORATE MARKETING

MGI Software today announced the appointment of Andrew Jackson as the Company's new vice president of e-commerce imaging and corporate marketing. Jackson, who was formerly senior vice president of marketing at JetForm Corporation, will lead MGI's corporate marketing division and its new e-commerce imaging business unit, which was formed in November 1999 to develop and market the Company's ZOOM Server imaging solutions, PhotoSuite software, web imaging tools and services.

Anthony DeCristofaro, MGI's president and CEO, said, "We are pleased to have Andrew join our senior management team. He's a strategic thinker and very knowledgeable in the e-commerce arena. His marketing experience in business products, vertical services and direct sales will boost our presence in the e-commerce imaging arena."

Prior to joining MGI, Andrew Jackson was responsible for providing strategic leadership and operational responsibility for worldwide marketing at JetForm Corporation, a company recognised as a leader in the emerging market for e-processes and enterprise workflow software.

Reporting to the CEO, Jackson also led the launch of Formsplanet.com, JetForm's first e-business aimed at providing customisable business form services to SMEs. During his tenure with JetForm, Jackson led the creation of industry-leading products, targeted new market opportunities, communicated with industry analysts and media, and leveraged relationships with partners on co-marketing and technology strategies.

Andrew Jackson said, "MGI has an impressive foundation on which to build a formidable business in e-commerce infrastructure solutions. Its investments in R&D, personnel, global sales and a growing client roster, have given MGI an unparalleled advantage in the market."
