Project managers from across the country are set to meet at London, Olympia on 21st and 22nd March 2012.

They will be visiting Project Challenge Spring Show (<http://www.projchallenge.com>), which this year takes place in the newly constructed West Hall at Olympia. This event is a 'must attend' for anyone interested in the latest technology and services to support effective project management. Leading suppliers will showcase the best products, services, software, training and consulting. Additionally, 40 free seminar presentations will run throughout both days of the show, delivered from open zones within the exhibition hall.

"It's going to be another a big year for Projects in the UK" according to event director Richard White. "Getting things done on time and on budget has never been more important".

He continues. "The Olympic games will surely be the most high profile, but there are significant projects being implemented this year in the construction, technology, transport and healthcare sectors which are seriously impressive."

Richard is upbeat about the role project managers can have in helping to turn around the fortunes of British industry. "As we enter a year which for many will have business challenges, there is one thing that I am very certain about. Effective project management and the skills required for successful project delivery will be a key requirement for every organisation across all industry sectors. Project Challenge is the perfect destination for anyone involved in managing projects, however big or small. It's your chance to get new ideas, update your skills and knowledge and road test the latest systems."

Entry to Project Challenge Spring Show is free to all attendees. Further information and online registration is available at www.projchallenge.com.
