A very nice house in the country, the holiday cottage dream might remain just that as tighter finances and career demands make it harder to factor in rural downtime on a regular basis, add on the purchase price, furnishing and the hassle of ownership and increasingly the smart option is to rent an up market holiday cottage on a regular basis instead of buying

Jude Dalton, founder of New Forest Living holiday cottages (<http://www.newforestliving.co.uk>) has noticed this trend, with the same families booking up to five times a year at their chosen New Forest holiday home; 'Many parents are considering re locating down here so its try before you buy, quality family and chill out time without having to mow the lawn'.

Only a 90 minute drive from London, New Forest see and do (<http://www.newforestliving.co.uk/new-forest/out-and-about>) can have you cycling past the flora and fauna by late morning. With 100 miles of off road surfaced tracks, top notch spas, great family non stuffy restaurants, and for the determined pony pesterer, opportunities for forest riding.
