

CyclingBuddy goes global

Submitted by: CyclingBuddy.com

Tuesday, 1 May 2012

CyclingBuddy.com (<http://www.cyclingbuddy.com>) the totally FREE website that helps members find other members to cycle with are today celebrating their 2 month anniversary. The site already has over 2,300 cyclists signed up and rapidly gaining traction in other markets too.

CyclingBuddy was launched on the back of a very successful running equivalent (www.joggingbuddy.com) which already has members in 99 countries around the globe.

Its founder Tony Piedade, said "CyclingBuddy is developing into a great community of cyclists (<http://www.cyclingbuddy.com>). Since the launch 2 months ago our members have already logged in excess of 80,000 miles and shared over 650 of their favourite cycling routes. I am very pleased that members overseas area already signing up too. We now have members in China, Australia, South Africa, USA, Canada and many european countries. Its early days, but very exciting"

Members who sign up to the site are able to also benefit from a number of neat features like planning a route, saving it and downloading the GPX files ready to be uploaded into a navigation product for the cyclist to follow. Members are also able to log all of their rides and keep track of their progress.

While it is still early days for CyclingBuddy.com, industry partners like Madison and Chain Reaction Cycles have already seen the potential and have secured a relationship with what promises to be the leading Social Networking website dedicated to cycling.

To sign up users should simply visit www.cyclingbuddy.com

For further information contact info@cyclingbuddy.com