WOMEN IN GAMING Networking Event (<http://www.gaming-awards.com/wig-awards2012.html>) starts Judging process for WiG Awards

WOMEN IN GAMING (WiG) (<http://www.gaming-awards.com/wig-awards2012.html>) 2012 third networking and awards event <http://www.gaming-awards.com> has announced that the judging process is about to begin. After receiving a high volume of notable nominees from across the global gaming sector, the Women in Gaming (WiG) prestigious judges are set to carefully assess who they think are leading, inspirational women in gaming, visit those in the running here: www.gaming-awards.com/wignominees2012.html
The glitzy gala of women who have dynamically stayed two-steps ahead of their male counterparts will have the chance to shine in their spotlight at the sophisticated Jumeirah Carlton Tower, Knightsbridge, London on the 27 June 2012. It's set to be an event to remember!

The conference will be at the heart of WiG, as prominent industry experts explore insightful topics such as how social media can be fully utilized within the business world and the evolution of technology, including how mobile optimization is integrating itself into the gaming world...topics that we can all apply within our industry. The leader panel discussion will also take a look at where gaming will be going next. The aim of the conference is to spark debate and discussion within an evolving gaming world. For more details about the conference, visit <http://www.gaming-awards.com/wig-conference2012.html>.

The prestigious panel includes high-flyers such as Gloria Irwin, Founder of Gaming & Hospitality Industry Professionals Association, Lyndsey Barrett, Director of Operations from The Ritz Club, London, Sue Schneider, who is one of the world's leading experts on the internet gaming industry and Tracy Cohen, marketing manager for TCSJOHNHUXLEY. These are just some of the high-caliber women joining Women in Gaming 2012. Women in Gaming 2012 is supporting 'Break Through Breast Cancer.'

Last year, attendees told us that "the calibre of the female influencers throughout the industry blew us away" and this year is set to be bigger and better with women being recognised again, for their wealth of knowledge, power and perseverance. Others described it as "one of the best conferences" that they have ever been to.
