

Let battle commence! Caerphilly business brings computer games to life.

Submitted by: Visit Wales

Tuesday, 22 May 2012

---

Already running an established and successful Equestrian Centre in Rudry near Caerphilly, David and Terrina Pesci-Griffiths have set themselves a challenge by adding to their portfolio 'real life' army combat games. Battlefiled Live Caerphilly offers children and adults the opportunity to swap computer games for reality as they embark on 2.5 hours of army missions, making a great addition to any UK short break (<http://www.visitwales.co.uk>).

Set on 7 acres of farmland near Caerphilly (<http://www.visitwales.co.uk/server.php?show=nav.10302>) that has been transformed into a battlefield with forts, bunkers, barricades and trees and using the latest infrared weapons. The game is completely harmless and safe both to the environment and the player, and can even be played by children as young as six, making a great family day out on your UK short break (<http://www.visitwales.co.uk>).

Terrina said "although we already provide competitions and activities for Equestrianism we felt that we would like to provide an activity that no one else had in this area in an outdoor environment that would be suitable for people from all walks of life and ages. Providing a facility where people can enjoy the computer games they play but for real - in the countryside, providing exercise and excitement for all. We welcome families, corporate events, stag and hen parties and can cater for birthday parties"