HVAC ductwork manufacturer and contractor Senior Hargreaves (<http://www.hargreaves-ductwork.co.uk/>) has opened a new project office at Calleva Park in Reading. Headed up by business development manager Gary Parslow the new facility will house project management and other technical support staff for rapid response to client needs. This means even better local service for architects, building services specifiers and construction clients in the South of England.

Hargreaves CEO, Tim Hopkinson commented, "We are extremely pleased to open our southern project office at Calleva Park. With the support of Gary and his team we will be able to ensure present and new clients benefit from the effective and proactive service that is synonymous with Hargreaves. Having sound ventilation experience close at hand will support our drive for customer focus in the Aldermaston area and throughout the southern region."

One of the most experienced ventilation contractors in the UK, Senior Hargreaves is an innovator in HVAC applications (<http://www.hargreaves-ductwork.co.uk/>). Areas of expertise include industrial installations for the nuclear industry, power stations and transport infrastructure.

Manufacture in stainless steel is a company speciality. Most famously, Hargreaves supplied the external polished ductwork that is such a prominent feature of Richard Rogers iconic Lloyds Building. This outstanding building received a Grade One listing in 2011 – a significant achievement. More commonly Hargreaves stainless steel ductwork is employed industrially where endurance make it an attractive option for clients seeking to minimise long term life time costs.

Senior Hargreaves has particular expertise in heat and smoke ventilation, producing a family of tested and approved fire rated ductwork for the capture, containment and ejection of smoke and products of combustion from buildings. Applications for this commonly arise in car parks, commercial kitchens and other areas where the risks of fire are severe.
