Square Mile move doubles space to 14,000 sq ft

LONDON (UK) – 19 July 2012 – Stroz Friedberg, LLC (<http://www.strozfriedberg.com/>), the New York-headquartered global digital risk management and investigations firm, has announced plans to expand its London operation, with a move to Capital House, 85 King William Street, London. The growing demand for its specialist services is set to boost Stroz Friedberg's 41-strong UK team, as organisations look to tackle cybercrime, fraud and security.

Seth Berman (http://www.strozfriedberg.com/category/professionals?alphabet=B&professional_bio_id=48), Executive Managing Director of Stroz Friedberg, said: "Since our move into London three years ago, we have experienced significant growth. The relocation to Capital House will enable us to build on this success, while delivering a high quality, client-focused service, from a prime location. This will also allow the further development of our cutting-edge digital forensics laboratory."

Stroz Friedberg works with clients across a wide range of industries, including the legal sector, where it advises 16 of the top 20 UK law firms, banks and financial service institutions, as well as energy, entertainment and technology companies. Specialising in digital forensics, data breach and cybercrime response, electronic disclosure, business intelligence and investigations, and security risk consulting, the team works at the crossroads of technology, law and behavioural science.

Eric Friedberg (http://www.strozfriedberg.com/category/professionals?alphabet=F&professional_bio_id=135), Co-President of Stroz Friedberg, added: "London has an enviable position as a global financial centre and this new office will play a key strategic role in looking after the needs of our global and local clients. Under Seth's leadership, Stroz Friedberg has achieved significant progress in the UK market, which has also enabled the team to win local matters on a number of highly significant cases."

Stroz Friedberg moves from its current Pinners Hall, Old Broad Street location to 85 King William Street London EC4N 7BL, a RREEF Investment GmbH development, on Friday 20 July 2012.
