London College of Garden Design Director Mark Gregory has announced the latest series of special info burst design courses (http://www.lcgd.org.uk/garden\_design\_courses.html) will be offered at the bargain price of £10 per evening. This season's courses concentrate on the delivery of designs with great service and construction.

Gregory said "The finish of a scheme whether it's hard landscaping or planting makes a huge difference to the success of a project. In these three evening sessions, designers and landscapers will be able to get some top tips from leading professionals to set them head and shoulders above the competition.'

The first evening concentrates on the delivery of small garden schemes and aims to discover how you can deliver projects profitably, on time and on budget. The second info burst evening brings together three leading landscapers to show how designers can get the best from their specialists and landscape teams. And the final evening looks at building quality finishes into design and build projects.

Gregory added "The evenings have been made available at a special low rate of £10 to encourage greater collaboration between designers and landscapers and to let these people discover the wealth of knowledge available at the London College of Garden Design."

The dates are 16th October, 6th November and 6th December. Each evening course is delivered at Regent's College in the Regent's Park in central London, located near good tube and rail links to make them accessible to a wide group of people.
