- Connect up to 20 people for a mobile conference call, for free -

London, UK: HulloMail™ (<http://www.hullomail.com>), providers of the award-winning visual voicemail mobile app for smartphones, has introduced Hulloha!™ Group Call; a brand new mobile group calling app that lets up to 20 friends connect in two simple steps.

To arrange a Hulloha!™ Group Call, users simply choose the contacts they want to talk to from within the app and press the 'Start Group Call' button. Invitations are then automatically sent to each participant via a text message, which includes a dedicated Hulloha!™ Group Call number that everyone can use. Participants can call the Hulloha!™ number using any mobile phone, on any network.

Andy Munarriz, founder and CEO of HulloMail said; "With the launch of Hulloha!™ Group Call, we have made on-the-fly mobile conference calling as simple as possible. There is no complicated sign-up or registration; instead users can arrange a call with up to 20 friends or colleagues in literally two steps. It is also zero-cost if the participants are within their agreed minutes, meaning users can access a group call with no hidden costs."

Pricing and Availability:

Hulloha!™ Group Call is available now for Android users to download, for free, (version 2.2 and upwards) via Google Play.

Hulloha!™ Group Calls are free if users are within their monthly bundled allowances. When monthly allowances are exceeded, network providers will charge according to network standard rates and individual price plans. Users are advised to check their price plans.
