Partners provide regionalized knowledge and support for Active Risk Manager (ARM)

Maidenhead, Berkshire, UK. October 30, 2012 - Active Risk (<http://www.activerisk.com>) announced today that it is expanding its Partner Program to address the increasing global interest in its award winning Active Risk Manager (ARM) solution for enterprise and project risk management, and to support expansion into key regional markets.

The Active Risk Partner Program is designed to provide local knowledge and support for Active Risk software, services, training, seminars, pre-sales, ARM implementations, and post-sales support. Currently Active Risk partners are supporting efforts in the Middle East, South America, Australia and within the US and Canada.

Loren Padelford, Executive Vice President and General Manager at Active Risk said, "Organizations all over the world have a growing need for easy to use risk management systems that enable them to take smarter risks. As global interest expands, it is imperative that Active Risk provides consistent, high quality, customized support to all of our customers. By working with best-in-class partners, we leverage their regional knowledge to help our customers drive real value from ARM and their enterprise and project risk management programs."

Active Risk partners benefit by bringing the industry-leading capabilities of ARM to their customers and local markets, and being part of a globally increasing risk management movement.

Charles Longridge, Global Partner Manager for Active Risk said, "We strive to work with established regional leaders, particularly those with specific industry knowledge including engineering, construction, energy, mining and government experience. It is all about enhancing the value customers can drive from their risk management initiatives and creating opportunities, both for our partners and for Active Risk."

To discuss partnership opportunities with Active Risk, please contact Charles Longridge, Global Partner Manager charles.longridge@activerisk.com.
