Anglian Home Improvements is launching a Christmas competition today to find the UK's best dressed 'Home for Christmas (<http://www.anglianhome.co.uk/home-for-christmas/>)' and enlisting the help of celebs Philippa Forrester, David Domoney and Julia Goodwin to judge the photo entries.

Designed to help you get into the Yuletide spirit in decorating your Ho Ho Ho'mes, Anglian has festive gift boxes of food and drink up for grabs in return for a winning photo in each of the three competition categories for the best decorated Christmas -- window, conservatory or garden. Launching on Monday 3rd December, the 'Home for Christmas' competition will run for two weeks until Monday 17th December, giving plenty of time to deck the halls, windows and much more.

If you think your festive window, conservatory or garden design has the Festive Factor, you can 'pin it to win it' on Pinterest, Tweet your photo to @Anglianhome or share it with Anglian on Google+, in each case using the hashtag #Christmashome. You can also email your entry to competition@angliangroup.com.

The esteemed judging panel will consist of high-profile celebs and specialists from the world of energy and environment, home interiors and garden design. TV presenter and environmental science expert Philippa Forrester will judge the best decorated windows category; House Beautiful magazine editor Julia Goodwin will judge the best dressed Christmas conservatory category; and TV garden expert David Domoney, the judge for the most festive garden category. One winner will be selected in each group to win a gift box full of indulgent food and drink treats for Christmas, delivered in time for the holiday season.

Entries will be showcased on the Anglian website (<http://bit.ly/UaRXd8>) so it's a great place to get festive decorating ideas too, with the winners being announced on the Anglian blog and social media pages on 18th December.

Christmas is the perfect time to spruce your home up with colourful decorations, both indoors and outside. Whether you opt for a traditional wreath on the front door or a more extravagant garden lights scene, this competition gives you the perfect excuse to start on your Christmas decorations and may provide you with some creative inspiration along the way.
