Glow products are considered a must for almost every kind of party. The scientific phenomenon known as chemiluminescence has brought many interesting and exciting creations to the world. Combining products that glow with UV neon paint and t-shirts allow each person to help display an extension of their personality whilst enhancing their party experience.

It is, however, vital to remember that even to the most basic of products such as glowsticks contain major chemical compounds. Thus bringing us to an often overlooked aspect of the many different available glow products - their safety. The Glow Company (<http://www.glow.co.uk/>) pride themselves on fulfilling all safety regulations and complying with all safety certification in the UK. It's important to know that even if a product is low cost, it is not low quality.

So the next time you step out to the latest party with glowsticks, glow necklaces, and any other glowing or flashing item don't be disappointed. With The Glow Company, you can be sure that you are receiving top quality and fully compliant glow in the dark products.

Here is a brief overview of how The Glow Company's products conform to all UK legislation:

- Genuine EN71 British Toy Approved
- RoHS Compliant
- No banned chemicals used within any of our products
- Genuine CE approval
- Safe
- Non-toxic
- Non-flammable

All products available at glow.co.uk (<http://www.glow.co.uk/>) are FULLY UK CERTIFIED and suitable for ages 3+, unless stated otherwise.

Although The Glow Company hopes everyone enjoys their products to their full potential, consumers are encouraged to double check and follow the instructions and guidelines on the product packaging.

Don't forget, glow products have a variety of purposes that do not always revolve around parties. For example, try using them the next time you go camping, or keep them in the car in case of a breakdown.
