It is often said that you should take nothing for granted in life and it appears that the same can also be said for insurance, at least according to one specialist supplier of insurance services. They believe that many owners of trailers are simply unaware of the fact that their standard policy does not actually provide insurance for trailers and that this could lead to a very nasty and expensive surprise in the event of damage or loss.

This surprising claim comes from a company who should know. IPG Retail is not only an insurance provider but a specialist insurer for trailers. Trailer insurance cover (<http://www.trailerinsurance.co.uk/>) is the fundamental part of their work and it is something that they have researched extensively. The fact that most standard policies fail to offer trailer insurance is something that has not escaped their notice.

'We don't mean to alarm people who own trailers but we feel that it is only right that they are made aware of the fact that their trailers may not have the cover they expect. In fact, their trailers may not be covered at all', claims a representative from IPG Retail. 'We have looked at many standard policies and the majority simply do not offer the cover that many owners believed they had. If you are a trailer owner, we definitely recommend you spend some time reading through your policy's small print as we feel you could be in for a nasty surprise.'

Not being covered for trailer may not seem like a big deal but for someone who may heavily rely on a trailer for their business, this could be a potentially crippling omission and one that could leave the owner out of pocket to a substantial amount. Trailers, like any other piece of equipment these days, can be expensive and difficult to replace quickly. The team at IPG Retail claim that only policies like theirs can give you peace of mind.

'Our policies are geared firmly at trailer owners so that means we cover every aspect. It means new for old insurance if your trailer is less than three years old, cover for replacement hire and cover for use in Europe. This is true trailer cover that you absolutely need.'
