Up until now, if you were looking to purchase a genuine antique table, either as a remarkable gift for a friend or as a unique piece of furniture for your own personal enjoyment, you would have had to have spent days or weeks searching the numerous showrooms, auction houses and warehouses up and down the country to find anything even remotely similar to what you originally had in mind.

However, a reputable antique dealer based in Potters Bar near Enfield aims to simplify the process of acquiring rare and interesting pieces of antique furniture with the introduction of a new online antique showroom which offers a quick and easy, exceptionally straightforward means of browsing through their enormous collection of vintage collectibles which can then be purchased directly using the internet with the minimum of stress or complication.

With over forty years of experience, Canonbury Antiques are proud to offer one of the largest antique table (<http://www.canonburyantiques.com>) collections to be found anywhere in the world which consists of unique and desirable examples that have been sourced and acquired from dealers and private collectors from a surprisingly diverse choice of locations including the United States, Eastern Europe and far flung destinations such as Australia and the Caribbean.

"Whether you are looking for an Art Deco cocktail table from the roaring 20s, a clean and refined Regency dining table or a faithfully and painstakingly restored Victorian coffee table, you can find exactly what you want in a matter of seconds using our website thanks to our fast and user friendly online search facility which features detailed descriptions and high quality photographs of every product listed so that you can accurately assess whether or not a piece matches your criteria and so that you can also see the exact condition an item is in before committing to a purchase," said a spokesman for the company.
