The gaming industry experts behind Supercasino.com have shown their support for Responsible Gaming Education Week (RGEW), currently taking place to increase awareness of problem gambling amongst industry employees and customers.

It has been reported by the American Gaming Association (<http://www.americangaming.org/events-and-programs/responsible-gaming-education-week>), that casino properties and gaming companies worldwide are all behind the event, taking place August 5th-9th 2013. Initially created by the AGA in 1998, RGEW was set up to promote responsible gaming nationwide. The annual event works on the principle that education is essential to providing responsible play. This year's theme is "How do you say responsible gaming?" promoting the message that regardless of the language gaming employees and customers speak, the important thing is that they all understand responsible gaming.

With a commitment to responsible gaming that ensures their customers stay within their limits, the online casino (<http://www.supercasino.com>) specialists at Supercasino.com are backing the movement. A representative from the firm explains the importance of raising awareness over issues such as this.

"The safety and wellbeing of our customers is our primary concern so we're pleased that this event is still going strong- however these efforts to address problem gambling need to be continue throughout the year, not just for one week during August. At Supercasino.com we take a vigilant approach to responsible gaming, and we also make sure our transactions are theft proof using our 128-bit SSL encryption."

The team at Supercasino look forward to reviewing the success of this year's Responsible Gaming Education Week.

With live roulette games broadcast on Channel 5 and Sky channel 862, it is the longest running and most popular online TV casino in the world.
