Boundary Capital (<http://http://www.boundarycapital.com/>) has today announced its investment in Infinity Wireless Limited (<http://www.infinity-wireless.com/>), a Birmingham based company providing data recovery software.

The software can retrieve deleted files from smartphones and tablets even when backup software has not been installed or fully backed up. This means that accidental or deliberately deleted files need not cause business or personal anguish, and the retrieval process is easy and swift.

Infinity Wireless (<http://www.infinity-wireless.com/>) is moving its software entirely to Software-as-a-Service ("SaaS") to enable an even easier user experience and also to open up the capability as a pay-as-you-go service via mobile operators and other channel partners to be able to add more value to their customer experience.

"We are delighted to be investing in this innovative and fast growing business" said Richard Leaver, Investment Director at Boundary Capital (<http://http://www.boundarycapital.com/>).

"They have approached this huge problem in an easy and intuitive way. We are also privileged to have such an experienced venturer as Simon Jones co-investing with us."

Boundary Capital (<http://http://www.boundarycapital.com/>) and the venturer are investing 205,000GBP between them initially to support growth and product development.

Lee Parry the CEO and Founder of Infinity Wireless said: "We are truly excited about this next phase of growth and delighted to have this support – financial and human – to help us on our journey. We have many products for the future too that we believe will be as disruptive as our current offerings."
