The guaranteed asset protection insurers at Click4GAP have shared their thoughts on the new BMW M4 convertible, which will cost from £60,730 when it goes on sale in the UK September 6th.

With a 2,979cc in-line 6 cylinder and twin-turbocharged engine the M4 can accelerate from 0-62mph in 4.6 seconds, and is around 60kg lighter than the outgoing M3 convertible at 1,730kg. The latest model from the luxury German automakers has a 3 part metal roof which opens and closes in 20 seconds and is said to provide significantly improved noise insulation. The interior boasts electronically adjustable and heated leather seats with recessed head restraints and integrated seatbelts. It also has a folding exterior and heated front seats, not to mention a range of other features which are sure to make it popular upon its release.

Specialising in GAP insurance for BMW (<http://www.click4gap.co.uk/quote4gap/bmw.asp>) and other premium brands, the team at Click4GAP are dedicated to pursuing industry news and updates. A representative from the firm shares their thoughts on the impending release.

“As a more powerful yet lighter replacement to the M3, we’re expecting the M4 to be extremely popular. Not only does it have a number of impressive features, but also a number of fuel saving technologies. This serves to highlight just how quickly advances in the automobile industry are made. Whilst this is great for drivers, it also means that older models depreciate much more quickly in value. That’s why it is so important to seek GAP insurance when spending out on a new model like the BMW M4. In the unfortunate event that the car is written off or stolen in a few years’ time, this form of cover pays the difference between the current market value of your vehicle and the amount you paid for it.”

The team at click4GAP look forward to the release of the BMW M4.
