Jackpot 247 review the news on an English themed gambling resort named 'Ye Olde England Casino' at the gambling hotspot of Las Vegas.

Clearly developers in Las Vegas feel that no gambling destination is complete without a little piece of England as a £500million scheme to make 'Ye Olde England Casino' a reality is set in to motion.

The strip is set to hit the jackpot with customers by having waitresses in police helmets, refreshment booths under giant black cabs and red telephone boxes serving coffee. The menu will include pie and mash, steak and kidney pudding and fish and chips.

Las Vegas council official Sandy Marinez said: 'So many of our visitors are from the UK, so this is a project which is way overdue. Many other nationalities are already represented here'.

Other themed casino destinations you can visit in Las Vegas already are The Venetian and The Paris. A spokesperson from Jackpot247 states: 'An English-themed strip in one of the best places to gamble in the world can be nothing but good news. Hopefully the resort will be beneficial on both sides of the pond with other tourists from Las Vegas taking an interest in the English gambling scene.'

The weather is better, there are great casinos and you can practically have all the comforts of home with all of your favourite dishes, but sometimes you just can't beat sitting on your own sofa with a cup of tea and a few of Jackpot247's online mobile games (<https://www.jackpot247.com/>). A lot cheaper, and a lot less flying! Then again, if you do decide to visit the gambling capital of the world, 'Ye Olde England Casino' should definitely be at the top of your list.
