BestVPN (<http://www.bestvpn.com>), the service that runs one of the largest VPN comparison sites (bestvpn.com) on the web, has announced today the release of its very own VPN service.

Inspired by a certain US presidential candidate, Drumpf VPN (<http://drumpfvpn.com>) will revolutionise the VPN business by making the Internet great again.

For a small monthly fee of $10, users will be able to close their Internet right up, say what they want to whoever they want without consequences, keep out all immigrants with a virtual wall, enjoy safety from freedom of speech, and thanks to zero encryption, all their data will be openly accessible by the authorities. We see this as an awesome offering that is available from today.

Unfortunately DrumpVPN will not work on any Apple products in the foreseeable future, due to their pesky insistence on encryption.
