Xperedon, the Anglo-Swiss enterprise, providing cloud-based web, software and IT development solutions to a global market, has rebranded with a new name UmbrellaDev - to reflect its growing status as a provider of comprehensive cloud-based services for the business sector and cloud-based fundraising and engagement tools for the non-profit sector.

Operational since 2010, UmbrellaDev's Xperedon brand has invested over $10 million in the development of a suite of high-impact, flexible cloud-based software solutions that are used by major organisations around the world.

Alongside UmbrellaDev's cloud-based software solutions, the company offers clients a full range of web and IT systems development, maintenance, support and project related services.

UmbrellaDev continues to build on its impressive client list, including Red Bull, Charities Aid Foundation and the International Hospital Federation, and is now gearing up for substantial growth.

David Hallett, CEO of UmbrellaDev, explains: "UmbrellaDev occupies a unique place at the forefront of innovation in cloud computing and digital services, working with leading organisations in the corporate sector and the non-profit sector. As a dynamic company we are ideally placed to support large organisations that require an agile partner who can deliver a comprehensive range of cloud-based systems, web and data services.

"UmbrellaDev's custom-built web, IT and data solutions are provided with ongoing support, meaning software and systems receive regular maintenance and upgrades, and clients receive 24-hour back up from our elite programming teams in London and Geneva.

"More and more organisations from multiple sectors are choosing UmbrellaDev as a trusted cloud-based systems partner, based on our committed approach and ability to provide quality solutions combined with dedicated customer service. Why not join them?"
