Demand for self-service data preparation tools is at an all-time high. Data-driven organisations recognise the “urgency of speeding up their ability to use data for actionable insights.”¹ Trifacta believes that this Forrester research report validates the establishment of the data preparation market category. It is Trifacta's view that the report features the success it continues to have as a market leader and innovator.

According to the report, “Trifacta delivers a strong balance for self-service by analysts and business users.”¹ The report also states Trifacta “leverages machine learning algorithms to automate and simplify the interaction with data, making data wrangling self-service for analysts and business users” and “has the most sophisticated approaches of evaluated vendors for sampling and automatic transformation processing options.”¹ Trifacta believes that this prestigious recognition solidifies its leadership position in the fast-growing data preparation market based on continued product innovation, strength of strategy and demonstrated results by delivering significant value to customers across industries around the globe.

“Since launching in 2012, Trifacta has focused on providing customers with a solution that is both easy to use and comprehensive in its power. Our mission is radical productivity: empowering analysts to sail through the hardest, messiest data problems with orders of magnitude, more speed and depth. The key is to equip people at an intuitive level with a triple threat of innovative visual user experiences, rich data interactions and machine learning technologies that make it simple,” said Joe Hellerstein, co-founder and CSO of Trifacta. “We are thrilled Forrester has recognised Trifacta as a leader in this fast-growing category. Data preparation is a fundamental component of business intelligence and data analytics strategy. We're proud to help companies across the globe innovate with data, by delivering best-in-class data wrangling solutions that enable all CI professionals to work more efficiently and productively with their data, dramatically reducing their time to insight.”
